Shimla

One of India's most favourite hill stations.

One of India's most favourite hill stations. Shimla was built on top of seven hills and is one of the most popular holiday destinations in India. This popularity was not gained recently but is a legacy that has been preserved since the 19th century. Here, one can witness the European architecture that has been maintained to this day and the cold weather that is like a breath of fresh air for those who live in hot and humid areas of India. After the end of the Anglo-Nepalese war, the stories of a place which had "English weather" soon spread through the British ruling elite of India.

Maintaining its old-world charm, Shimla became the center of art, theatre and technology. People here portray a sound balance between traditional values and modern thoughts. Earlier, Shimla was nothing more than a forest with a temple and now, one can see a lot of development here that makes life easy but also keep the people connected with the beauty of nature. It is surely a place that is worth dwelling in.
